Skin bleaching reduces the concentration or production of melanin in the skin. Melanin is a pigment produced by cells called melanocytes. The amount of melanin in your skin is mostly determined by genetics. People with dark skin have more melanin. Hormones, sunlight, and certain chemicals also affect melanin production. When you apply a skin bleaching product to the skin, such as hydroquinone, it decreases the number of melanocytes in your skin. This can result in lighter skin and a more even appearance to the skin.

A keratin treatment is a process that smooths and often straightens hair. You might also hear it called a Brazilian keratin treatment or a Brazilian blowout. It involves applying products to the hair, blow-drying it, and sealing it with a flat iron. Keratin is a natural type of protein in your skin, hair, and nails. A keratin treatment adds additional keratin to your hair, which can help to reduce frizz, increase shine, and strengthen hair. If you have curly or wavy hair, keratin treatments can also make your hair straighter.

No doubt, keratin hair mask does wonder to your hair and offers a wide range of advantages. It has a number of uses that will benefit you in some or the other way. But here are some key uses of keratin hair mask which helps you get the most out of it:

- Keratin mask is used to transform damaged hair strands into silkier, shinier hair. With regular use, it provides cumulative effects, making hair stronger and healthier. Keratin mask leaves hair easier to comb and more manageable, so it takes less time to style it.
- It is used to hydrate and soften your hair, making it more resistant to humidity. Keratin mask is used to deeply repair and nourish dry and damaged hair while restoring its strength and elasticity.
- It is also used to moisturize your hair, minimizing split ends and frizzes.

A keratin shampoo is a shampoo with the protein 'keratin'. When you check the ingredient list on the back of the flask, you will mostly find the words 'hydrolized keratin' or 'keratin amino acids' on there. You could also say there are two kinds of keratin shampoos. The most have keratin as a supporting ingredient. And some have keratin as the main ingredient. The latter is mostly called 'keratin shampoo' by brands. We, however, call all shampoos that contain this precious ingredient a 'keratin shampoo'.
