1) Quick Results – Offline adverts reach far more people in less time and money. For example: If a local paper has a circulation of 50,000, that 1% sales lead could potentially be anything up to 500 inquiries.

2) Longevity - Offline advertising has a recall value, if done intelligently. You might not get instant results but people will remember you in the long run for that one right thing you did in the campaign. Print/ TV or radio campaigns stay in the hearts and do not die so soon.

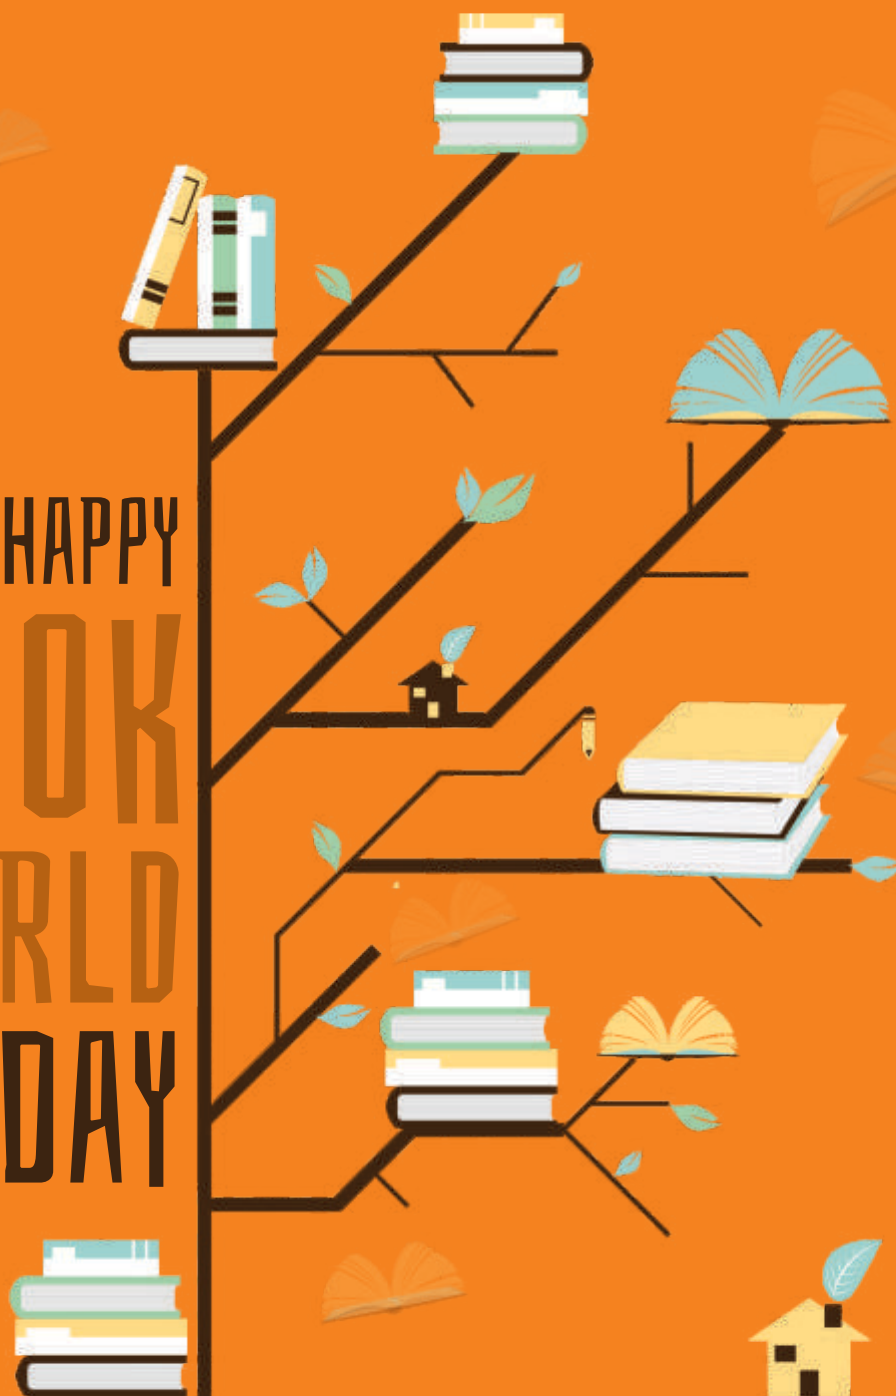

3) Effective - Offline campaigns stay for a longer time and can be utilized time and again. The same offline branding can be put on various online platforms and the effectiveness of the entire campaign could be doubled.

4) Dependent - A business doesn't have to be dependent on an internet connection.

5) Positive Result - Many people respond much more positively to something they can hold and touch something they can see in their hand which has taken some time and effort. On a subconscious level, it tells the customer a business is willing to go the extra mile for their attention.
