Did you know ?

Imagine this: It's Sunday afternoon ...
Want to snack on something simple, not too sweet, and yet enough to satisfy your sweet tooth?

A glucose biscuit is usually a small, flat-baked sweet biscuit usually eaten in combination with coffee, milk or chai.

As we have said, you could imagine yourself dunking your glucose biscuit into coffee or tea, but did you know that Glucose biscuits pair perfectly with water too?

Did you know ?

Nice biscuit, the name probably derives from the city of Nice in the south of France. 1929 editions of the Hull Daily Mail carried an advertisement for Huntley & Palmers Nice Biscuits using the phrase "Delightful as the town after which they are named", indicating that the manufacturers intended the public to associate the biscuit with the French city 'NICE'.

Huntley & Palmers made a Nice biscuit as early as 1904.
