Bain Marie ◀

A bain-marie is a piece of equipment, also known as a double boiler or water bath, that uses hot water to gently cook or warm food. It consists of one container of food placed inside a larger container holding hot water, ensuring even and indirect heat to prevent burning or curdling of delicate dishes like custards, sauces, and chocolates. Bain-maries are used in both commercial and home settings, and modern versions can also be adapted to keep food chilled with an ice pack.
