About Us

Established in 2012, we, Devdatt Industries, are one of the leading manufacturers and suppliers of Parboiled Rice. It is high in taste, very fine in quality and absolutely free of any kind of impurities.

In the Indian soil, the importance of rice is known to all of us. It is the staple food of 65% of the population, with the remaining percentage also consuming it very frequently. In addition to this, rice is one of the major commodities for export and a source of earning foreign exchange. Along with rice milling, processing of rice bran for oil extraction is also an important agro processing activity. This generates massive income and employment. Keeping all this in mind, we make rigorous efforts to maintain high quality standards in our Parboiled Rice.

For domestic consumption, rice is usually packaged in gunny bags or plastic bags. In addition to airtight plastic containers, a polyethylene film can also be used to store rice in an airtight manner. This type of storage requires paddy to have a moisture content of 30-40% relative humidity. We make sure that the bags are clean, dry and well stitched. This is helpful in limiting the risk of loss as much as possible, right from the beginning. In order to transport rice, it must be dried. Rice has a storage life of about two years at a water content of 13%.

Quality Assurance

At present, we have acquired a good position in the market owing to the high quality standards of our product. Our key endeavors are always directed towards further improvisation of our quality. In line with company ethos, we keep upgrading our manufacturing facility. To produce high quality rice, we use paddy procured from the reputed local vendors, which assures that the paddy grains are fresh and not chemically processed. In addition, we have a full fledged quality checking unit and a team of highly experienced quality auditors that examines the entire manufacturing process and cross checks the finalized products on the basis of various parameters.
