Galvanised After Weaving (GAW)

This process forms or weaves chain-link into a fabric first, and then soaks in a large galvanised bath which adhere the zinc-coating. This ensures that all the wire is coated, even the cut ends created during the weaving process.

Galvanised Before weaving (GBW)

In this process the wire is pre-galvanised before it is formed into a fabric. The weaving process creates an exposed end that will lack coating and be more apt to some minor rust in wet and severe weather conditions
