PIEREN STEP

PIERENSTEP forearm crutches can be programmed individually with the configuration software for each patient.

A specific algorithm is calculating the partial weight on the foot by means of measurements of the forces applied on the crutches. An acoustic and vibration alarm warns the patient when he applies an incorrect weight on his foot during locomotion. Thereby the therapist is setting a specific tolerance. The gait information of the patient can be saved in the memory function of the crutches over several weeks. If required, the therapist can readout and analyse those information by connecting the crutches to the computer. The software is giving detailed statistics over the patient's steps. This function does not require radio connection between the computer and the crutches.

Phase 3

Phase 1 Simultaneous touch of the injured foot and the crutches.
Phase 2 Controlled, constant and uniform initiation of the force on the crutches while rolling the injured foot into a step.
Phase 3 Simultaneous release of the injured foot and the crutches.

Spirit Medical Systems Group (SMSG) understands that as a healthcare provider, your business's success is a financial balance between high-quality patient care and a cost-effective delivery of that service. With this understanding, Spirit Medical Systems is driven to design and manufacture rehabilitation products that can meet and exceed our customers' expectations. Rehabilitation strategies and technologies that address a multitude of patient deficiencies are the focus of our efforts. From range-of-motion (ROM) deficits, neuromuscular disorders, therapeutic exercise, to orthopedic dysfunctions and gait training – we use our experience, expertise, extensive academic partnerships, and clinical collaborations to help improve treatment efficiencies. A key part of our mission is driven by the passion and commitment to excellence that our employees demonstrate – from our senior management team, through all departments, manufacturing stages, processes, and beyond.
