

MALE / FEMALE PATTERN BALDNESS

MALE HAIR LOSS

Looksforever understands what a disturbing effect thinning hair or hair loss can have on the self-image and self-esteem of a person as hair has a lot to do with how we look at ourselves and others. Despite the fact 80% of men will eventually experience male pattern baldness or Hair Loss, which is very common among males, it does not seem to lessen the blow when it finally happens.

While there are multiple causes of male pattern hair loss, the ramifications can be tremendously disturbing and may become a physical issue. It can have a distressing effect on a man's self-esteem, self-belief and comfort.

FEMALE HAIR LOSS

Hair loss is not just a male baldness problem. As many as one out of four women suffer from some form of thinning hair or hair loss, at some point in their lives, which is also called as female pattern baldness.

Maternity can be a trigger for some hair loss conditions as well as the natural thinning process which is a result of the post-delivery hormonal adjustment in women.

Apart from what is responsible for causing hair loss in women, the effects on self-esteem can be disturbing especially in a society that puts a high price tag on how a person looks. We are all expected to at least try to live up to the flawlessly groomed model looks that we regularly see on the television and the covers of magazines.
