What is Cork

Cork is a thick, resilient part of the cork oak tree's crust and bark, and is a natural material that can be harvested after 20 to 30 years of growth. This is a sustainable resource that does not harm trees directly but harvests bark every ninth year and it is dried, sliced and compressed, and is rebuilt as a lightweight, durable cork, and it is processed by drying, slicing and compacting, and is rebuilt with lightweight, durable cork.

The misunderstanding and truth about Cork

▶ Is not it difficult to preserve and manage cork products?

Cork is 100% natural material that you can feel the texture and color unique to cork as you use it over time. In case of contamination, rub and clean with a soft brush or a hand using water and detergent, then dry it in a shady place avoiding direct sunlight.

▶ Water repellent

Unlike leather that is deformed when it touches water, cork contains a shereine ingredient and is resistant to water and has excellent water repellency. Even if water touches the product, it dries up and it is restored in the process of drying itself, so that it is not twisted or deformed greatly.

▶ Durability

The honeycomb structure of the cork provides greater friction coefficient and impact resistance than other hard surfaces, is very elastic and has excellent durability to make sofas and umbrellas as well as flooring and wall materials.

▶ Environment friendly / Natural texture and color

Cork is an environmentally friendly and sustainable raw material that is 100% biodegradable, recyclable and renewable. Unique color and texture that can be obtained from natural materials give you a unique and varied feeling of cork.
